AWRIGHT... WHO PACKED POPICLES IN THE EMERGENCY KIT?

Local emergency preparedness stores provide essential information, supplies

BY SHANE TOPONCE

There are several stores in Utah that carry items such as 72-hour emergency supplies for those interested in emergency preparedness, and they can also provide information on what to do in times of emergency.

"If you earnestly, have you provided for your family a year's supply of food, clothing, and where possible, the revelation to produce and food may be as essential to our survival welfare today as boarding a plane was to the people in the days of Noah," said President Ezra Taft in "Teachings of Ezra Taft."

Percent of Utahns don't have a supply of food storage due to restrictions on space, the high cost of purchasing a year's supply of food, and poor taste of the food," said Richard Field, National Sales Director for Future Foods, a company that distributes bulk food to the public. Future Foods specializes in bulk food products. They help fill the need for the public in putting together a supply food storage.

Future Foods has 130 menu items to choose from including fruits, vegetables, soups, soy products used by restaurants and grains," said Loutensock, an area manager for Future Foods.

Red Cross and County Sheriff work together in the event of emergencies

BY LAURA ELLERTSON
Universe Staff Writer

In fighting local disasters, the Utah County Sheriff's Department and the Red Cross make a great team.

Deputy Sheriff Richard Casto, head of the Emergency Services Division of the Utah County Sheriff's Department, said the county has an Emergency Operations Plan and a team to manage an Emergency Operations Center if a disaster hits.

Casto said there is not any type of emergency to provide for county residents but in an earthquake or other emergency situation, the EOC can provide for food to be sent.

The Emergency Operations Center is the brain and heart of every emergency situation, Casto said.

Casto said they plan for the worst emergency scenarios, and then hope that the worst will be adequately prepared for a disaster that may occur.

Meetings are held quarterly with officials as well as designated managers over emergency services.

The plan for the county in an emergency is detailed and very lengthy, and if the plan would be carried out in conjunction with the Utah County Sheriff's Department.

of the American Red Cross, Utah County Sheriff's Department public presentations on emergency preparedness and interested parties can call the office to arrange for training.

"In Utah County we have a peculiar circumstance with the chemical weapon destruction taking place at the Tooele Army Depot," Casto said.

The county has developed a Chemical Stock-pile Emergency Preparedness Plan specifically for situations which might occur at the Tooele Army Depot.

The Sheriff's Department, or those operating the EOC could access the Emergency Alert System from a 911 center and send messages out to specific groups.

Karen R. Campbell, the Emergency Services Director for the Utah County Chapter of the Red Cross, described the responsibilities of the Red Cross in a local emergency as "mass care."

"The mission of the Red Cross is to help people prevent and prepare for disaster," Campbell said.

Although the Red Cross is not a government agency, it is chartered by Congress to provide special services to disaster victims.

Campbell said the Red Cross does not participate in evacuating buildings, but it does take care of the evacuees. The Red Cross assists primarily with sheltering and feeding.

In an emergency, the Red Cross provides a hotline for relatives to call in and receive information on people residing in the disaster area.

Campbell said the Red Cross will actually send people out to search for those who are missing.

Campbell believes that "we have a good thing going" in Utah county. She attributes that to the emphasis that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints puts on emergency preparation.

The Red Cross has a pre-agreement for shelter with Nebo, Provo and Alpine School Districts, as well as with the LDS Church. In all cases the Red Cross agrees to pick up the liability and the costs.

Campbell said in most cases, a school provides the best shelter because of the shower facilities inside.

The Red Cross, which is a division of the United Way, is able to provide free disaster assistance as result of generous contributions from ordinary people.

"The Red Cross never leaves until the last person has been helped," Campbell said.

The Red Cross publishes several brochures that can assist in preparing people to handle emergencies.

The brochures propose sample family disaster plans, offer information regarding specific disasters such as earthquakes or fires and provide helpful emergency preparedness checklists.

The Red Cross also assists in damage assessment.

Emergency Preparation

BYU disaster facilities and management: Ready for whatever trouble comes along

BY LAURA ELLERTSON
Universe Staff Writer

If you must be present when disaster strikes, BYU is not a bad place to be.

"We are better off than most universities," said Kerry Baum, emergency preparedness coordinator for BYU.

Baum said BYU was one of the first universities to start an emergency preparedness program.

In the event of an emergency, BYU has designated a room in the Conference Center as the Emergency Operations Center.

Baum explained that this Emergency Operations Center, or EOC will be run by administrators on campus.

During an emergency the EOC will be run by three representatives, each from 20 different agencies across campus. Each shift will be comprised of one representative from each agency, allowing the EOC to remain fully staffed 24 hours per day.

The designated room, which appears to be a regular classroom, has four storage cabinets full of items to be used in the center during an emergency.

There is a bank of telephone jacks along the wall of that room and an adjoining room has jacks which are hooked to an antenna on the roof for communication purposes.

A disaster victim information clearance center will be housed in an adjoining room. Although it is not in place at this time, Baum plans to have a copy of the student and faculty database available to those working in the information clearance center.

In an emergency situation, the records of students and faculty would be annotated as reports came in from around the valley.

A representative from each ward would be responsible for passing on information such as the number injured, killed or missing to the stake level. From there the information will be sent to the Emergency Operations Center. The EOC will relay any necessary information to Church headquarters in Salt Lake City.

Parents and relatives residing outside of the disaster area will be able to call into the information clearance center to get information about or updates on the condition of family members who are attending or teaching at BYU.

BYU has two radio systems set up for communicating during an emergency. The one system is connected with and reports into Church headquarters, while the other is set up to communicate with the city offices, the county, fire departments, hospitals and the Sheriff's department.

Currently all BYU janitors have two-way radios which are operating on the 800 MHz frequency.

Student Auxiliary Services has a warehouse that supplies all of the food for the dining halls on campus. Baum said this warehouse is always stocked completely full so that if something unexpected happened, the temporary needs of students and faculty could be met.

Baum estimates that in an emergency, the food stored in the warehouse could feed the entire campus for three days including students, their families and the BYU faculty and staff.

Not long ago, BYU purchased two military surplus water purification units. Those units could purify 70,000 gallons of water each day drawing from pools on campus and if necessary, the Provo River.

Baum estimated that 35,000 gallons would be needed each day to take care of the students, their families and the staff.

Each building on campus has a designated Emergency Building Coordinator, usually the senior janitor, who assists the dean in communicating the status of the respective building. All building coordinators have been trained to handle emergency situations.

Baum said that perhaps Stanford is the only university better equipped for disaster than BYU.

"The entire state of Utah has one of the best earthquake preparedness programs in the nation," Baum said.

Baum said the Church encourages members to rely on government aid as little as possible. Only in situations where BYU couldn't provide its own resources such as fire engines, would the university turn to the city for help.

In addition to the above mentioned facilities, BYU is fortunate to have a communication network that exists between all BYU student wards, their respective stakes and campus Disaster Task Force members. A stake president is invited to represent student wards and stakes as a member of the University Disaster Task Force.

Many responsibilities for emergency preparedness and response in emergency situations have been delegated to students serving at the ward level.

Each ward emergency preparedness coordinator has been instructed to maintain accurate, updated ward lists including a list of emergency response personnel residing in the ward boundaries such as nurses, police or radio hams.

Wards should establish communication networks for situations with and without the use of land-line telephones.

According to the recommendations of Church leaders, ward emergency preparedness coordinators should keep a list which identifies members who are runners, as well as those who have bicycles, cellular phones or ham radios.

Baum has prepared a draft plan for the administrators who would be running the Emergency Operations Center during an emergency situation.

The Church has put together an Emergency Response System comprised of ham radio operators serving as emergency communication specialists. Those called, test their system every couple of weeks to ensure that all is running properly.

It is the responsibility of ward emergency preparedness coordinators to ensure that ward members are educated as to how to turn off their utilities and how to provide basic first aid care.

Church members are also encouraged to recognize non-LDS needs as they may not be as well prepared.

Student wards are asked to test their emergency communications system periodically to ensure its success.

Each BYU ward should have a well publicized assembly area designated in case of emergency. Many parking lots on campus have been designated by BYU wards or stakes as meeting places during emergencies.

BYU is currently offering training opportunities to faculty and staff.

On September 27, Baum ran an emergency evacuation drill in the Abraham Smoot Administration Building. Baum is pleased to report that everyone was out of the building within three and one-half minutes and after eight minutes they were sent back in the building.

BYU offers nine-week certification programs to employees for a fee of $20. The courses prepare participants to assist in significant disaster response areas.

Emergency preparation is receiving more emphasis now on campus and throughout the Church than ever before. Baum's position as Emergency Preparedness was just made a full-time position in May of 1995.

Montana LDS temple facing opposition

BILLINGS, Mont. — The proposed construction of an LDS temple here has brought a flood of calls to City Hall, as officials consider a church request for annexation of land.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints wants to build a temple on church-owned property near the Billings Rimrocks, a rugged area at the west end of town.

Some residents of the area quickly rose in opposition, claiming the temple would destroy the natural beauty of what locals call "the Rims."

The Billings City Council will hold an Oct. 28 hearing on the proposed annexation.

"We have received no application for a temple at this point," city-county planner Bill Arnold said.

"The issue for the meeting is only, should that land be in the city and can the city provide services for it. You can't decide on the annexation of land based on speculation of what future land use might be."

The City Council has been asked to annex 34 acres that the church wants to use for a temple. Church leaders say it would serve nearly 60,000 Mormons in Montana, northern Wyoming and the Dakotas.

Councilman Michael Dietz said he has been besieged with calls and letters from temple supporters. Mayor Chuck Tooley said he has received dozens of calls and letters, from people on both sides of the issue.

The hearing Oct. 28 will be preceded by a report from city officials who have been studying whether the city can provide sewer and water connections and other services for the property.

Italy launches world's largest cruise ship

MONFALCONE, Italy — The world's largest cruise ship — taller than the Statue of Liberty and too wide for the Panama Canal — will be christened this week.

The 893-foot-long Carnival Destiny, built at the Fincantieri shipyard near Trieste in the Gulf of Venice, is scheduled to begin its maiden voyage with passengers from Miami on Nov. 24. The week-long cruise will include stops in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The ship will first dock in Venice on Tuesday for a two-day port call before the traditional christening ceremony of breaking a champagne bottle on the hull.

Construction of the $400 million ship for Miami-based Carnival Cruise Lines began last year.

The 100,000-ton ship can carry up to 3,400 passengers and more than 1,000 crew members.

With a height of 231 feet, the ship is taller than the 152-foot Statue of Liberty. Its 116-foot width makes it too fat to squeeze through the Panama Canal.

The largest cruise ship currently in operation is the 70,000-ton, 861-foot Sun Princess owned by Los Angeles-based Princess Cruises. That ship, also built by Fincantieri, was put into service last year.

6 inmates escape Arizona prison; 2 caught

FLORENCE, Ariz. — Six prisoners, including three convicted murderers, broke out of a private prison Saturday night, authorities said.

The six were in an outdoor recreation area with other prisoners about 7:40 p.m. when they cut through three fences surrounding the Central Arizona Detention Center and fled into the desert, said Susan Hart, a spokeswoman for the company that operates the prison.

Two of the inmates — one a convicted murderer, the other a convicted burglar — were apprehended at a Florence convenience store around 11 p.m., Hart said.

State and local police used helicopters and dogs to search for the fugitives, who were wearing prison-issue gray pants and shirts.

All of the escaped inmates were originally from Alaska, Hart said. The inmates besides the convicted murderers were also jailed for serious offenses, Hart said, although she did not know what specific crimes they had committed.

The prison, located on the outskirts of this small community about 45 miles southeast of Phoenix, is a medium-security facility that holds about 1,000 inmates. It is operated by Nashville, Tenn.-based Correction Corp. of America.

Computer models failing in flight 800 probe

CALVERTON, N.Y. — A unique computer analysis of passenger injuries has so far failed to help investigators shed light on the cause of the TWA Flight 800 explosion, a source familiar with the work said Sunday.

However, the work continues because it is expected to help the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board strengthen Boeing 747s to improve passenger safety, the source told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity.

This is the first time investigators have used powerful computers to produce three-dimensional models of passenger injuries from a crash.

Investigators hope patterns may emerge that could help them determine what exactly went wrong when the jumbo jet exploded July 17, falling into the Atlantic off Long Island and killing all 230 people on board.

Among the factors being studied was a cone-shaped burn pattern seen across rows of seats that were located above the plane's center fuel tank, the source said.

"They're looking at a pattern and trying to find out what would have caused that. But when they see a pattern, they're not finding the evidence," the source said.

Ultimately, investigators hope to learn what parts of the plane might be redesigned to make it safer. For instance, the source said, the project so far has established that some passengers were injured by the collapse of railings from the 747's upper deck.

Conservatives take control of Japan's parliament

Associated Press

TOKYO — Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto's conservative party completed a historic comeback Sunday, capturing almost half the seats in Japan's lower house of Parliament to secure a dominant place in government.

The results of Sunday's election mean all but certain re-election for Hashimoto as prime minister and a return to glory for the Liberal Democratic Party, which governed Japan alone from 1955 to 1993 before falling amid a series of corruption scandals.

Attention now turns to whether Hashimoto will keep his campaign promise to overhaul the bureaucracy — which dominates Japanese policy making — by cutting the number of ministries in half.

Even as the results came in, Hashimoto appeared to be backing off from quick action, refusing to name the top priority of his new government.

"I don't think it's a good idea to pluck out one and make that into the star product," the prime minister said.

The Liberal Democrats won 239 of the 500 seats in Parliament's lower house, which chooses the prime minister, the Japan Broadcasting Corp. reported.

That's far better than their previous strength of 206 seats. But the party still lacks a majority in the upper house, which was not being chosen Sunday, so Hashimoto said his party plans once again to govern in a coalition.

He said the Liberal Democrats will seek support from their current coalition partner, the Social Democratic Party, which holds a substantial bloc in the upper house but won only 15 lower-house seats.

The No. 1 opposition New Frontier Party took 156 seats, while the liberal-leaning Democratic Party won 52, both slightly below their strength in the last parliament. The Communist Party took 26 seats, up from 15.

Voter turnout reached a record low of just under 60 percent, down from the 67 percent mark set during the last election in 1993.

The new parliament is expected to convene at the end of this month or in early November to select the prime minister.

In foreign policy, the Liberal Democrats' dominance means continued support for the Japan-U.S. security alliance. Hashimoto also has been hawkish as a negotiator in trade disputes with the United States.

The party's victory could presage more tensions with South Korea and China, which were irked by Hashimoto's visit this summer to a shrine that honors Japan's World War II soldiers, including men who were executed as war criminals.

Domestic issues, however, had been the focus of the campaign.

From the Liberal Democrats to the Communists, each party said it was best qualified to cut the power of career bureaucrats and eliminate a morass of regulations criticized by Japanese and foreign businesses alike.

Yukiyo Inoue, 32, said she voted in Tokyo for the Communist Party because she didn't see any other choice.

"Everyone's positions are so vague and so many parties keep splitting up," she said after casting her ballot. "I know the Communists will never gain power, but I just wanted to cast a protest vote."

Since the Liberal Democrats lost power in 1993, three different coalition governments and four prime ministers have held power in Japan.

Hashimoto took over in January at the head of an odd-couple coalition between the Liberal Democrats and their longtime rivals, the Social Democrats.

Japan's anemic recovery from four years of recession, a scandal over the use of HIV-tainted blood products, and the costly failure of a string of housing lenders had led many to question how the government is run.

Sunday's election was the first under a new system that combines 300 single-seat districts and 200 seats allotted proportionally to political parties.

Previously, a district had several representatives — a system critics said pitted candidates from the same party with the same policies against one another, resulting in a campaign focused on promises of government favours.

Many candidates, however, still campaigned for Sunday's election on pork-barrel promises, and the new system didn't appear to greatly influence the results.

Opposition parties had hoped to capitalize on Hashimoto's unpopular plan to raise the national sales tax from 3 percent to 5 percent, a move he says is needed to offset a ballooning debt and help support an aging population.

The New Frontier Party attacked the plan but may have hurt its chances by proposing what was widely seen as an unrealistic $180 billion tax cut.

In the end, it may have been the Liberal Democrats' reliability as a party that presided over Japan's economic superpower status that won the day.

"If we change our leadership, we won't be trusted overseas," Tokyo voter Namie Watanabe said. "The Liberal Democrats have my reservations about them, but they've done a lot for Japan since the war."

Earthquake will hit Utah eventually; prepared for it, some experts say

By SHANE TOPONCE
Universe Staff Writer

Next big earthquake to hit Utah and it is something everyone should definitely prepare for, according to earthquake specialists. The last major activity to occur in the Wasatch Fault Zone took place about 400 years ago in the area of "Nephi," said Mathew Mabey, assistant professor at BYU who specializes in earthquakes. "The person who knows about geology is that these beautiful mountains were projected up from the earth's crust creating a major fault system," Mabey said.

"An earthquake is something that you can't prepare for, a major disruption could occur in the future," Mabey said.

"You should get our 72-hour kits and prepare yourselves."

It is important to remember that emergency measures will not prevent an earthquake from happening. It may help people survive according to 29 step help issued by the American Red Cross. The Red Cross suggests four basic things to do during an earthquake. First, if you are inside, stay calm. Second, those inside should stand away from, or crouch under a table and stay away from windows. Third, those outside should stand away from buildings and trees as well as power lines. Fourth, those on the road should get away from underpasses and bridges to a safe area and remain there until the shaking stops.

The Red Cross also suggests six things to do after an earthquake.

•First, it is important to check for injuries and provide first aid to those in need.

•Second, check for safety: gas, water, sewage breaks, and assess the overall damage.

•Third, clean up dangerous spills.

•Fourth, make sure to wear good shoes. Debris will be all around, and it is important to protect the feet.

•Fifth, turn on the radio and listen for instructions from public safety agencies.

•Sixth, it is important to use the telephone only for extreme emergencies.

•Avoiding the danger of shock, explosion or fire from electrical damage and/or gas leaks during a quake, and preserving a safe source of emergency drinking water afterwards, are important earthquake survival issues," according to a letter issued by Quake Safe corporation.

"Quake Safe has developed a water heater support system which is specifically designed to withstand both the vertical and horizontal motions typical of an earthquake," said Janet Peterson of Quake Safe Co. "This system can minimize the risk of explosion or fire while preserving a safe source of emergency drinking water."

In the event of an earthquake, there are several survival items the Red Cross suggests be kept on hand. They suggest having a radio with extra batteries, a flashlight, a first-aid kit and book, a wrench for turning off gas and water, a supply of water, food, blankets and sleeping bags.

uation. Sometimes, Call said, you have to look to family and friends to help out.

Ned Hill, former BYU professor of finance, recommended paying yourself 10 percent of your paycheck and depositing it for an emergency. Hill explained that many employers offer the option to have a specified portion of your paycheck automatically deposited to your savings account. "This way your savings is taken out before you even see it," Hill said.

Hill said married couples, especially those with children, should have several types of insurance for monetary support during an emergency.

Term life insurance provides death benefits and is the least expensive.

Usually offered through your employer, disability insurance is important to have. Many people don't think about disability insurance, however, "more are likely to be disabled than to die prematurely," Hill said.

Other important insurance policies to have for emergency situations are auto and health.

In addition, Hill said in order to be financially prepared for emergencies people must avoid unproductive debt. Hill defined unproductive debt as 1) your debt does not increase in value and 2) your debt does not help you to be more productive.

For example, receiving an education and purchasing a house is productive debt. Credit card use is unproductive debt, Hill explained.

If you or your spouse, or both, should die and you have children, Hill said to be sure to have a will. The will states what will happen with your children and your assets. If you don't have a will written up, the state you live in often designates what should happen concerning your children and assets.

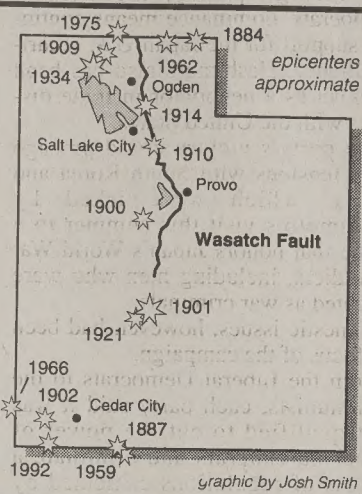

Hill also said to have a year supply of basic foods for emergency situations.

Is the 'Big One' coming for Utah?

Officials stress the importance of being prepared for a major earthquake in Utah. Though the last major earthquake to strike Utah occurred over 400 years ago, the Wasatch Fault Zone remains very active. A look at significant quakes that have shaken Utah since 1850:

Fifteen earthquakes of magnitude 5.5 and larger have struck Utah since 1850.

Investing crucial in financial emergencies

By MELISSA MURCHISON
Universe Staff Writer

financially prepared for an emergency situation discipline and planning said David A. Young, former business student and president of Provo money management firm, Paragon Capital Management Inc.

"No. 1 rule of financial success is simply not spending more than you earn," Young said.

For example, if you earn $10,000 and spend $8,000, you have a feeling of control and safety. On the other hand, if you earn $30,000 and spend $40,000, then you begin to feel like you're in a swimming pool with a water pump running.

Young recommended, especially for newly married couples starting out, saving six months worth of income as a goal.

To accomplish this, Young said people should first pay themselves 10 percent of their paychecks before paying their bills.

"You can set aside more than that's great," Young said. But the important element is to first pay yourself and develop a discipline necessary to begin saving for emergencies.

Call, a BYU professor specializing in personal finance, planning said, "The critical thing is not how much you save, but it is engendering the habit." Some may live on 5 percent, others at 10 percent. Call said it is an individual amount and choice.

Students, saving while in school is generally not possible, Hill said. Usually students are living off their savings, however, receiving an education is preparing students for the future and making an investment. Call said to have a regular, on-going savings program as soon as possible.

Depending on how long you've saved determines how much savings you have to fall back on in an emergency situation.

Dr. Madison U. Sowell

BYU Karl G. Maeser General Education Professor

As a BYU undergraduate majoring in both Italian and comparative literature and minoring in philosophy, Madison U. Sowell completed his BA summa cum laude in three years, excluding two years for a mission to Italy. He earned his MA and PhD in Romance languages and literatures from Harvard in less than four years and began teaching at BYU at the age of 26. Since 1989 he has chaired the Department of French and Italian, and for the past two years he has served as a Karl G. Maeser General Education Professor and as a member of the University Strategic Planning and Self-Study Committee.

Professor Sowell has done postdoctoral work in jurisprudence at Columbia University, in medieval studies at Dartmouth and Cornell, and in early printed books at the University of Virginia.

He has published more than 60 scholarly articles, essays, and book reviews and has written, edited, or co-edited five book-length publications, including Italian Echoes in the Rocky Mountains (1990) and Dante and Ovid: Essays in Intertextuality (1991).

The first faculty mentor to the Honor Code Council and a recipient of both an Outstanding Teacher Award and an Alcuin Fellowship in General Education, Professor Sowell delights in mentoring students, directing Study Abroad programs, and teaching a variety of courses, especially Dante's Divine Comedy, western civilization, and the Book of Mormon.

A convert to the LDS Church, he has served as a ward organizer, stake clerk, high counselor, and, for the past three years, as bishop of the BYU 92nd Ward. He is married to Dr. Debra Hickenlooper Sowell, a dance historian, and they are the parents of two daughters.

Emergency Essentials, Inc. located in Orem, is a store dedicated to helping people prepare for natural disasters and other emergencies.

Emergency Essentials specializes in kits and packs full of equipment to aid in survival of disasters.

Some of the equipment that they offer are 72-hour kits designed especially for students and a classroom kit, perfect for schools and church groups. This kit can take care of emergency needs for up to 35 people, according to the Emergency Essentials catalog.

Emergency Essentials also offers literature informing people of important facts to know in times of emergency.

In literature sent with 72-hour kit information, buyers are informed how to best use their kits. Kits should be located near an exit of your house. Each family member should have their own kit. A light source should be kept on top of the kit, so that it can be found quickly. These are only a few of the suggestions offered by Emergency Essentials.

Out-n-Back is another store offering emergency preparedness products such as 72-hour kits and year supplies.

"Out-n-back got their start in emergency preparedness before changing their focus to back packing equipment," said Jason Leonard of Out-n-back. "We carry quite a bit of emergency supplies such as water supplies, first-aid kits and a ton of good literature on how to prepare for emergency."

gency."

"Out-n-back has a national mailer that deals with all of our emergency preparedness products," Leonard said.

There are other ways of preparing for emergencies. Quake Safe corporation of Provo offers a water heater support system designed to withstand both vertical and horizontal motions of an earthquake. "In such catastrophes, the water heater may become a family's sole source of fresh, clean, safe drinking water," according to a letter issued by Quake Safe Co.

CBS's new line-up pulls ratings out of cele

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Maybe it's the cozy slogan. After all, a catch phrase worked for "must-see" NBC.

CBS sought to "welcome home" television viewers this fall to a place they had avoided lately, promising lots of old friends would stop by.

Enough people have responded to make CBS's comeback, together with the relatively desultory performance of its rivals, the story of the young television season.

"We're feeling that progress is being made," a cautious CBS Entertainment president, Leslie Moonves, said last week. "But crowing? No, hardly. You won't hear that out of me."

The memories of last season, when CBS finished a third among the big three networks with disastrous programming choices like the megahyped "Central Park West," are too fresh in his mind.

Moonves, brought in after the network bottomed out, dreaded opening his newspaper each week: When the top 20 shows in the Nielsen ratings were displayed, CBS frequently had as few as one.

In last week's Nielsens, however, CBS nabbed nine of the top 20 spots.

The network has finished a solid second behind ratings champ NBC during the TV season's first month, and its ratings are up over a comparable period last year, while NBC, ABC and Fox all are down.

CBS banked on familiar faces like Bill Cosby and Rhea Perlman to anchor new sitcoms this fall, and both are among the new season's top performers - and that's before Ted Danson's show "Ink" begins Monday night. Weekend shows like "Walker, Texas Ranger" and the new drama "Early Edition" also are hits.

The network, traditionally a favorite among older viewers, abandoned last year's strategy of trying to copy Fox's success with the young crowd, which had conjured up the disconcerting look of a senior struggling into Spandex.

"Welcome Home" beseeches those traditional viewers to return, and even the network's house ads, free of quick cutaways and jarring graphics, are soothing. If young people want to tune in, too, so much the better.

"He's turned the ship around," Bill Croasdale, president of network broadcasting at Western International Media, said of Moonves. "He's not attracted the audience that the advertisers want to attract, but advertisers are taking a second look at CBS."

CBS is expected to score 100 Monday when the organizers of the Grammys, who considered abandoning their 22-year broadcast out-up for another five years.

The network also is talking about trying to win back National Football League broadcasts.

CBS's success this year has come largely at the expense of ABC, which has slid into third place.

ABC's ratings are down even except for Thursday, which was weak, according to an analysis by the BJK&E Media Group.

Michael J. Fox's "Spin City" ABC's only breakout hit, which public appears to be tiring of, favorites like "Roseanne," "and "Lois and Clark."

"In some instances, they stay some shows for too long, with other instances the creative has begun to dry up," Croasdale said. "Coach" was sent on hiatus along with two other shows in struggling Saturday night line.

ABC defends itself by pointing its relative strength among viewers.

Readiness important for students, experts say

By LAURA ELLERTSON
Universe Staff Writer

While funds and space are scarce, students can prepare for emergencies by preparing themselves with the bare essentials.

In the Encyclopedia of Mormonism, the rationale for emergency preparedness is explained. "By living providently and by acquiring in advance the skills necessary to cope effectively with difficulties, Latter-day Saints can minimize or avoid the suffering that accompanies the unexpected."

Kerry R. Baum, Emergency Preparedness Coordinator for BYU, suggested that students need to prepare themselves mentally for emergency situations.

"The first line of defense in any disaster is what you personally know," Baum said.

"Self-sufficiency" has become a kind of buzz word among church members. The idea of self-sufficiency is helping oneself to the point of self-reliance.

Baum said if there is a major disaster or emergency on campus, the faculty and staff will not look out for students. Faculty members have been instructed to report to their own stake and ward organizations.

Students should plan with family members where they would meet in emergency situations. The Red Cross and ward emergency preparedness coordinators could be of great assistance when constructing an emergency plan.

Church members are encouraged in all situations in which a need exists to go first to their families, then to the church welfare and, as a last resort, turn to the government for help.

Family preparedness has been established as a welfare principle for a long time.

The Bishop's storehouse system is available in cases of disaster, and BYU has the resources necessary to provide food and water for students for a few days.

Baum said the church's program for food storage is not a 72-hour kit, but a full year's supply.

While there is a big push for church members to build up their food storage, church leaders realize that in most cases because of limited space and limited funds it would not be feasible for most students to store an entire year's supply at this time.

"The (Welfare Services Executive Committee) recognized that the resources of single and married full-time students are limited and are primarily used to acquire their education — this being an essential aspect of self-reliance. ... Individuals may choose to keep a small amount of cash on hand for emergencies," wrote Bishop Glenn L. Pace in a letter to Elder Vaughn J. Featherstone.

The letter also suggested that college students continue to be taught the principles underlying personal and family preparedness, but that each person be allowed to apply the principles as guided by the spirit.

"You do not need to go into debt to obtain a year's supply. Plan to build up your food supply just as you would a savings account. Save a little for storage each paycheck. ... Make your storage a part of your budget," said President Ezra Taft Benson, former President of the church, during a General Conference address in October 1980.

President Benson also said that if members are saving and planning for a second car or television set or any other item which merely adds to their comfort or pleasure, and they do not have one year's supply, then they need to change their priorities.

Baum encourages students to buy their groceries at least one week at a time.

Baum also recommends that students store some water. Two-liter bottles could easily be filled and stored underneath a bed. It would be wise, Baum said, to empty the bottles and refill them each semester.

To purify water before storing it, water can be boiled for 10 minutes or each gallon can be purified with 10 drops of bleach.

Water should not be stored in empty milk cartons, because the water will become contaminated. Instead, water should be stored in plastic two-liter bottles. Baum suggested that water stored in two-liter bottles would not need to be purified with bleach because of the small volume.

When constructing a personal 72-hour kit, it is important that the kit be stored in a water resistant bag or container which is easily portable.

A basic 72-hour kit, as outlined by Emergency Essentials includes food, water, a method of purification, items for warmth and shelter, sources of light, tools, first aid supplies, communications tools like radios and whistles, personal sanitation items, extra clothing, money, copies of important documents and stress relievers like toys for children.

When preparing a kit, students may want to include additional items like cooking equipment, mess kits, sun block or insect repellent as space allows.

Items should be packed in sealable plastic bags to keep them dry and airtight. The kit should be stored near an exit.

A 72-hour kit guideline compiled by the University Police recommended that foods be high in calories and nutrition. Foods must be nonperishable. It is best to include foods that require little water for preparation since water supply may be limited during an emergency.

When placing food items in the kit, it is important to label them with the date of purchase. In an emergency situation the most recently purchased foods should be eaten first.

Canned meats like Vienna sausage, corned beef, tuna and Spam are good, and so is peanut butter.

Dried fruits, graham crackers, canned juices and powdered milk are also recommended.

STATE OF THE ART: A Andelin, a homore from Allentown, Pa., majoring in economics, admires an exhibit of paintings and drawings by Jennifer Hillam Barton on Thursday. The exhibit, titled "Continuum," is displayed on the first floor of the Maeser Building through Dec. 20.

Local artist introduces exhibit

Progression and improvement of her artwork were some of the thoughts shared Thursday by a local artist opening her exhibit of paintings and drawings at the Maeser Building.

Jennifer Hillam Barton's exhibit "Continuum" will be displayed on the first floor of the Maeser Building through Dec. 20.

"The images in my work stem from the environment of family, friends and home," Barton said. "Existing in different states, from literal to non-literal, the images are intermixed and layered, giving a sense of different levels presented simultaneously."

"These paintings are an attempt to represent an emotional timeline or continuum — mixing ideas and images from past, present and anticipating the future," she said.

Barton, who teaches an oil-painting class at BYU, said she felt an artistic block when she started graduate school. "Stifled by the academic environment" was the way she described her feelings. Barton said she found a magazine article after completing school that described the lack of ideas. The article mentioned five reasons for creativity blocks: constant evaluation, surveillance, reward, competition and restricted choice.

She decided to simplify her artwork by dropping all color. She began black and white drawings.

By simplifying her art, Barton said she felt pressure being lifted off herself. "What is your art all about" was lifted off of me," she said.

Learn to accept failure was one suggestion Barton offered. She said, "Let yourself make mistakes and feel free to do what you want."

Barton concentrated on forms while working on her black and white drawings, using ghost-like images, shadows, reflections and different stages of the same person.

When she felt comfortable with her drawings, her next step was color, especially pastels. "I had lots of fun doing these," she said.

Barton now works with oil painting, which she said is intimidating. She said this type of painting is more complicated, and she has been waiting for the chance to do it.

"Vision is always ahead of execution," was a phrase Barton repeated often. She reminded students that images in the mind do not always come out the same on paper.

Cluff awarded lectureship

By THOMAS J. ABBOTT
Universe Staff Writer

The 1996-97 P. A. Christensen Humanities Lectureship has been awarded to a BYU Spanish Department professor.

Russell M. Cluff, recipient of the award, will be the keynote speaker of the P. A. Christensen Humanities Lecture at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 23 in 2084 JKHB.

The prize was awarded to Cluff for his outstanding research accomplishments, said Cheryl Brown, Associate Dean of Humanities and head of the committee which awarded the prize.

Cluff has completed a full-length article on the short story sequences of Mexico's Hernan Lara Zavala, Guillermo Samperio and Sergio Pitol.

Cluff also said he wrote an essay that will accompany a book of short stories by the Dominican writer Virgilio Diaz Grullon. The book is to be published by the National University of Mexico.

In addition to the essays, Cluff is continuing research. "I am currently working on a book-length project concerning the short story sequence in Mexico," Cluff said.

The Oct. 23 lecture, which is free and open to the public, will be a display of Cluff's research. His lecture is entitled "Mexico and the Short Story Sequence Tradition."

The Christensen Lectureship, given in remembrance of BYU English professor Parley A. Christensen, carries a $1,000 honorarium along with additional research and travel expenses that are meant to help further their research, Brown said.

Cluff said that the lectureship will aid his continuing research in Mexico and the Caribbean islands.

Recipients also receive a plaque that is displayed along with plaques of previous winners.

EYE OF THE STORM: Former BYU running back Hema Heimuli gets caught by a Tulsa defender in last year's 45-35 BYU win at Cougar Stadium. Heimuli was the last Cougar running back to rush for 100 yards in a game until Brian McKenzie tallied 132 yards against the Golden Hurricane Saturday night at Tulsa. With the win over Tulsa, BYU improved its record to 7-1 overall and remained unbeaten in WAC play at 3-0.

Cougars calm Tulsa storm 55-30

By JON D. HILL
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU football team won its fifth straight game and remained undefeated in the WAC (3-0, 7-1 overall) Saturday evening as it defeated the Tulsa Golden Hurricane 55-30.

With the win, the Cougars may have possibly gained more than just a victory on the field.

During the week prior to the Tulsa game, BYU head coach LaVell Edwards referred to the match-up as being a "test" for the Cougars and a measuring stick of where the team is in its preparation and drive for the WAC championship. The Cougars passed the Tulsa test with flying colors and may have made a statement to their remaining opponents in the process.

Going into the game, it appeared as if BYU's test would come from Tulsa's defense which had only allowed 21 points per game, 18 below BYU's average. The Cougar offense aced this test as it gained 549 yards + 329 passing and 220 rushing — en route to 55 points. As the game wore on, however, it became obvious that BYU's test would be in the form of adversity.

With just over seven minutes remaining in the second quarter, BYU scored to take what seemed to be an insurmountable 27-3 lead. But the Golden Hurricane had other ideas.

Tulsa quickly added a James Anderson field goal and a Reggie Williams rushing touchdown on its next two possessions to cut the lead to 14 with 1:02 left in the first half. Tulsa didn't stop there. With BYU in its two-minute offense, cornerback Terrance Joseph stepped in front of a Steve Sarkisian pass and returned it 48 yards for a touchdown, cutting the deficit to 27-20 at halftime.

As the Cougars took the field to receive the second half kickoff with the wind in their face, the game had a new feel and it appeared as if Tulsa had the necessary momentum to upset its second ranked opponent of the season. BYU, however, responded to the challenge and drove 80 yards in seven plays for a touchdown and a 34-20 lead.

Edwards said the touchdown on BYU's initial second half possession led to the victory. "The key to this win was the third quarter," he said. "On the first drive of the second half we drove into the wind and scored a touchdown. That drive showed a lot of poise and character on our part."

Tulsa responded with 10 unanswered points to close the gap to 34-30, but the Cougars remained undaunted.

On the ensuing kickoff freshman running back Ronney Jenkins returned the ball 44 yards and the offense went the remaining 56 in four plays for another touchdown and a 41-30 lead. When Tulsa got the ball back, the BYU defense came up big when linebacker Brad Martin recovered a fumble and advanced it to the Tulsa 6-yard line. From there, Jenkins punched the football into the end zone and BYU never looked back.

Sarkisian said the game had momentum shifts and BYU's ability to battle through those was a good sign. "The game had a lot of twists and turns and a lot of ups and downs. We fought through adversity and pulled through for the win. "We hung together well. That's a sign of a good team."

Besides BYU's team victory, the game was filled with some outstanding individual performances. Sarkisian passed for 329 yards and five touchdowns — one more passing touchdown than Tulsa had allowed all season — on 21 of 32 attempts as he sprayed the ball around to nine different receivers.

Brian McKenzie rushed for a career high 132 yards on 13 carries becoming the first Cougar to rush for more than 100 yards since Hema Heimuli ran for 115 yards against San Diego State in 1994.

On the defensive side of the ball, linebacker Shay Muirbrook led all Cougars with 11 tackles and added an interception that he returned for 38 yards.

While Edwards was happy about the win he is concerned about the number of penalties BYU is receiving. "The penalties killed us," he said. "We need to get that taken care of." BYU was penalized 11 times for 127 yards.

BYU now prepares for another road game against conference opponent Texas Christian University (2-4, 1-2 WAC) which lost to the University of Utah 21-7 on Saturday.

Spikers kill Rice, Tulsa, improve to 10

By BRANDON J. WIGHT
Universe Sports Writer

The Cougar spikers extended their winning streak to seven, then eight games as BYU thumped both Rice and Tulsa 3-0.

The Cougars appear to have found a groove. The spikers shined in just about every category in both matches. BYU, who was at .500 just less than a month ago, has now improved its record to a respectable 10-6 overall and 5-1 in the WAC.

"We are playing extremely well," BYU head coach Elaine Michaelis said. "Our timing and serving has been exceptional, which has helped us to improve and win. These last couple of wins have gained us some confidence and allowed us to have some fun."

In Friday's match with Rice, the Cougars seemed to have fun as they easily coasted to a 15-1, 15-3 and 15-7 win over the Owls. Tough serving and monster blocking kept the Owls (8-12, 3-3) frustrated all night and kept the Cougars on top from start to finish.

In the first game, the Cougars came out hitting a .591 with 13 kills and no errors. Fortunately for Rice, BYU slowed down by hitting more of its normal percentage of .231 and .333 in game two and three.

Junior All-American Amy Steele led way for the spikers with 12 kills, 10 blocks and a .500 hitting percentage. Sophomore Korie Rogers was close behind with six kills, eight blocks and a .545 hitting percentage. As a team, the Cougars recorded 14 blocks in the three games for an average of almost five per game, and hit .369.

In Saturday's game, Tulsa played a tougher game but posed no threat as the Cougars dumped the Golden Hurricane 15-5, 15-9 and 15-4. BYU served an impressive nine aces in the three games including a career-best from Rogers who had four aces.

"It always comes down to whether you can serve and receive, and I thought they had a hard time receiving our serves," Michaelis said.

Once again leading for the Cougars was Steele, who hit a .476 and had 14 kills. Gale Johnson added nine kills, a .412 percentage and the game-best 11 digs. Johnson's career dig total now stands at 952, which is fourth in the BYU record books and just 48 shy of the 1000-dig plateau reached by just three other Cougars.

"Both teams we played were good, but we are just playing fantastic volleyball," Johnson said. "I think we are prepared for our next three tough games against New Mexico, UTEP and San Diego State."

Cougar men's golfers to play in California

Universe Services

Off to a fast start in 1996, the BYU men's golf team will look to maintain its hot pace with two tournaments in five days in Northern California.

First up for the Cougar squad is the ASF Invitational in San Francisco, which begins today. Held at the San Francisco Olympic Club, the two-day invitational will bring together four teams ranked in the nations' top 40 (BYU, UTEP, San Diego State and Notre Dame) plus 10 other high-quality teams. The remainder of the field includes Kansas, California, Nevada, Oregon, Oregon State, Pacific, Pepperdine, UC Irvine, UCLA and host San Francisco.

Making the trip for the Cougars will be three nationally ranked players -- Michael Henderson (23), Andy Miller (56) and Joe Summerhays (56) -- plus freshmen Jose Garrido and Jay Auvigne. Miller and Summerhays paced the Cougars to an impressive first place finish at the Nike Northwest Classic in Oregon last week. Both players finished in a tie for third place individually after shooting a 216 for the tournament.

"We're really excited," BYU head coach Bruce Brockbank said. "We had a really good win last week and are looking forward to playing in San Francisco next week."

"It's always a highlight to play at the Olympic Club. We want to improve on our fifth or sixth place finish there last year. It's a difficult course, so it will be interesting to see how we handle it."

From San Francisco, the Cougars will travel down the coast to play in the Fresno Lexis Classic, which will be held at the 6,815-yard, par-72 Fort Washington Country Club on Oct. 25. Miller, Summerhays, Henderson and Garrido will be joined by Shaun Jepsen and Ryan Oldroyd to form the six-member Cougar squad that will compete in Fresno.

"Fresno will be a good test for us," Brockbank said. "It is a really good course and it will give us an opportunity to test ourselves against some of the WAC and District VII schools." Both tournaments will be 54 holes, with 36 holes played the first day and 18 the second.

The Cougars conclude their fall season at Long Beach State Nov. 4-5.

Women netters travel to L.A., men to compete in Utah tourney

Universe Services

Eline Chiew and Angela Jewell will represent BYU's women's tennis team in this year's ITA All-American Tournament in Los Angeles, beginning Tuesday.

Both Chiew and Jewell are coming off successful play in the fall tournament in Las Vegas. Chiew also competed in last month's Rowe Clay Courts Collegiate Tennis Championships in Maryland, where she finished in the round of 16.

"Eline and Angela have had some good wins beating players ranked above them this fall, and they've been practicing extremely well," said head coach Clark Barton.

Chiew will go into the competition with a 3-2 record. Jewell has a 1-2 record in fall tournament play.

Qualifying rounds are on Tuesday and Wednesday with the main draw beginning on Thursday at the Riviera Country Club in Los Angeles. The Cougar players will play two matches per day starting Tuesday morning. The two are also first alternates in doubles competition.

The eight-member men's Cougar tennis team will play against the other in-state schools in next week's Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament hosted by the University of Utah.

The five-day, two-flighted event will showcase players from Utah's four university teams in preparation for the regional fall competition at the end of this month.

BYU's Boris Bosnjakovic is seeded second and teammate Manuel Calvo is fourth place in their singles flights. In doubles competition, the duo is seeded first.

"This will be a good opportunity for us to see how our players are coming along as well as see some of our regional competition," said head coach Jim Osborne.

Injuries have already been a factor in the Cougars' fall tournament competition, but after a couple of weeks of rest, Coach Osborne hopes the team will be ready to play.

"I think the rest has done a lot of good for the recovery of our players," Osborne said. "Kengo Usui is still questionable because of an ongoing migraine headache, and he has not practiced this whole week."

The tournament, which is scheduled to be played outdoors (weather permitting), begins this afternoon, with the finals on Friday.

Women harriers take 1st, men tie for second ing freezing weather and rain, cross country teams led a 280-ant race, with the women har-aining with 20 points.

ng her teammates, BYU's ay Pugmire claimed second the women's rainy East Bay ese with a time of 17:49, beaty by Nicole Jefferson of State.

at's where Western State's top ended -- BYU's women harried across the finish line, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth. s top scorers following were Maggie Chan (17:53), th Jackson (18:04), Lynnette en (18:12), Jessica Heiner and Melissa Teemant (18:22). lacing in the top 12 were Ward in 10th place and Kim in 12th.

oo o's so cold," BYU's Elizabeth brian said following the race, uing the sentiment of most of soaked racers. BYU's athletic bu had a heated tent waiting for runners at the finish line and and many cases of "very cold en but no serious injuries.

Coach Patrick Shane ed surprise and gratitude at e spectator turnout, despite d and rainy weather. Many ers were soaked from the rain eir umbrellas and rain coats ng little protection.

he runners were the true wet most of the BYU squad racing t shorts and tank-tops. "We've n worse," Jessica Heiner said, ng off the rain.

YU men's team also enjoyed ing finish Saturday, scoring 61 w. o tie with Weber State for sec- ace behind Western State ity.

lder led the Cougar pack with ace place finish in the 8K race ime of 25:26. Other top scor- the BYU men were Brandon g (25:35), Sam St.Clair t, Fikre Wondafrash (25:44) and Andrew Carmen (25:55).

With the rain falling even harder than it had for the women's race, the BYU men weren't free from weather's wrath either.

"I don't know what I was feeling. I just know it was tough," Wondafrash said.

Chad Schmidt, a freshman from California, placed 24th for the BYU harriers -- but not without feeling the effects of the cold. He said in his home state, races are usually canceled in such weather conditions.

Winning second place in the Reebok Grand Prix isn't the only accolade the men's cross country team recieved this weekend. They were also named the No. 1 cumulative grade point average in the nation by the U.S. Cross Country Coaches Association.

WHAT A BLAST! Construction workers in Provo Canyon continue blasting a pair of tunnels designed to smooth the commute between Heber and Provo. The tunnels are slated for completion in December 1998.

Tunnel construction causes traffic delays

By WHITNEY A. SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

Some of those out to enjoy the crisp fall air and seasonal colors that October brings to local canyons are finding that the scenic trip along US-189 through Provo Canyon is not as easily accessible as it has been in the past.

Work continues in Provo Canyon just east of Vivian Park to the southern side of Deer Creek Reservoir to construct two new tunnels through the canyon.

The two tunnels, begun in April 1996, are being built to accommodate the increasing volumes of traffic from the Heber City area to Provo and Orem.

According to Jim Golden, a field engineer for the Utah Department of Transportation, the tunnels will be 270 feet (southbound) and 240 feet (northbound) long, and are being constructed with Utah's environment in mind.

"The tunnels are short, but they will increase driving safety through the canyon and the environmental damage will be minimal," Golden said.

Several other proposals have been discussed in years past as to how to allow more traffic to safely pass through the canyon, but according to Golden the tunnels proved to be the most ecologically sound.

"While the tunnels are the most expensive of all the proposals, they will not do nearly as much environmental damage as attempting to build a road directly over the land or build a bridge across the river and build on the opposite side of the water," Golden said.

From 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays motorists can expect one lane traffic between work zones which have been spread out in 10 and 15 minute intervals.

To inform motorists of specific delays because of blasting, variable message signs are in place at the mouth of Provo Canyon and in Heber City at the junction of U.S. 40.

According to a press release from the Utah Department of Transportation these signs have been installed to explain the delays for the day and will give specific information on blasting times the day before and the day of various blasts.

On blasting days motorists can expect 30 to 40 minute delays while travelling through the canyon and motorists are advised to plan travel time accordingly.

Blasting will usually take place in the late morning and early afternoon hours between 8 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

Jeanne Shaw, spokesperson for the Utah Department of Transportation, said that while commuter and visitor traffic continues to be heavy in the canyon, motorists are encouraged to slow down and be patient, especially in work zone areas.

The project is expected to be finished in December 1998.

Student calls food storage a relief

By MELISSA MURCHISON
Universe Staff Writer

A BYU student said it is a huge relief and a peaceful feeling knowing he and his family have at least a six month supply of food for an emergency.

Shane Dahlen from Redmond, Ore., majoring in psychology and philosophy, said as he was growing up, his family always had at least one year supply of food. After being married four and a half years and having started a family of his own, he and his wife, Laura, began to store food on their own.

Currently his family of four has a six month supply of food. Dahlen said a sales representative came to their home selling "package deals" of food supply. These package deals are eight to ten boxes with main dishes contained in each. For example, one box contains breakfast items, another drinks etc.

"It got us started and it was quick and easy," Dahlen said. The packages provide enough for three meals a day for two adults and two children.

"It was one investment, all at one time for about $1,500," Dahlen said. He explained the boxes do not take up much room, and have a shelf life of seven to eight years.

Dahlen will continue to increase his food storage by adding 50 gallon drums of water, as well as grains, fruits, vegetables, honey and other foods.

He also hopes to add MREs, military meals ready-to-eat, to his food storage. MREs provide three meals a day in one packet and add variety to his current food supply.

Provo residents back proposed Academy Square renovation, poll shows

Restoration advocates call for bond election

By SCOTT BRADFORD
Universe Staff Writer

Recent polls show that Provo residents overwhelmingly approve the renovation of Brigham Young Academy to create a new public library.

In a study done by Dan Jones & Associates Inc. in August and released last week, 80 percent of Provo citizens polled said a larger library is needed in the Provo area, and 69 percent said the Academy would be a good location for that library.

The study also showed that 60 percent of the people polled believed the Academy, specifically the Education Building, should be renovated as this library.

The study showed that citizens supported the renovation because they want to preserve Academy Square, and they feel that Provo's existing library is located in an inadequate building.

The main reason for opposing the renovation was the tax burden which would be assessed to residents of Provo. Many also believed the present library to be adequate.

The study was done to show Provo city administrators that a remodeling of the Academy is a feasible project, and to encourage the administration to put the issue on a bond election ballot.

Douglas L. Smoot, a professor of chemical engineering at BYU and the chair of the steering committee for the Academy Square project, said if the bond is placed on the ballot in February and passes, Provo will gain a state-of-the-art library in a superior building.

Smoot said the library would include more than 500,000 books, 350 computers and 12,600 square feet available for a children's library. The building will have an auditorium, numerous conference rooms and a computer training room.

Smoot said the Academy has been deemed by the National Trust Historic Foundation as the number one building west of the Mississippi River which should be restored.

Mayor George Stewart said he is in favor of a renovation of the Education Building at the Academy but, he said, he has a few concerns before he will support the restoration as a bond issue. Stewart said he will support the bond issue under the stipulation that if the bond fails, all of the buildings at Academy Square will be torn down. The current proposal will only guarantee that three of the four buildings will come down.

Stewart said he is also concerned about the city going into deep debt, but if the citizens of Provo are willing to pay for it, he will support their decision.

In a proposal prepared by the Feasibility Committee for the project, it showed the proposed total cost of the renovation to be approximately $23,834,900 with $16,720,000 to come from the proposed bond. The remainder of the money needed will be donated by the private sector, including The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' commitment of donating $1,000,000.

In a letter to the Provo City Council, A. Legrand Richards, vice-chair for the Provo Library Board, told council members, "This is our opportunity to make a major contribution to our heritage and history, while providing our citizens with a 'world class' public library in a spectacular location." The City Council will discuss the bond issue Nov. 12.

Will there be a BY Library?

Students say apathy leads to low voter turnout in Utah

By JAMIE HEATON
Universe Staff Writer

Election day is coming, but many Americans will not be at the polls to vote.

Although percentages are slightly higher for voter turnout in presidential elections, in 1994 only 36 percent of the voting-age population voted for representatives, according to the 1995 Statistical Abstract of the United States.

"I think if you don't vote you should leave the country," said Laitina Desisto, a senior from Austin, Texas, majoring in psychology.

"I don't know that I necessarily want to vote. We either stay with someone I don't like or get someone who is old and out of touch. Both are not my favorites," said Melissa Halls, a senior from Salt Lake majoring in sociology.

In the Wednesday night presidential debate both President Clinton and Senator Dole addressed the issue of voter apathy.

President Clinton said, "The American people must be responsible and realize there is a connection with their lives and what we do in Washington."

Senator Dole said he was worried about people who don't vote. "We need to have more debates like this one and need to invite candidates from all parties."

Statistics show that the lower the social-economic status of a person, the less likely the person is to vote, said Jennifer Christensen, a junior from Lehi majoring in political science. The lowest voter turnout comes from Americans 18-24 years old.

There are a variety of reasons why people don't vote, said Ryan Benson, a junior from Bountiful majoring in political science. People feel that their vote doesn't count: "They feel with the electoral college the winner takes all and if their favorite candidate is ahead in the polls he is already going to win."

Benson agreed with students from states besides Utah who are choosing to vote by absentee ballot. "Every vote counts more in California than in Utah."

Dole has a 15 point lead in Utah and most Utah voters have their minds made up. In California there are quite a few undecided voters, and there is only a 9- to 10-point Clinton lead.

Benson also said that many nonvoters are satisfied with the way the nation is going and therefore don't vote. Others are apathetic toward issues. "Dole and Kemp are focusing on economics ... people are satisfied with economic conditions, and Clinton's foreign policy is criticized as being ambiguous and not principle based."

Women vote more than men, Benson said, and issues facing women are playing a major role in this election. Clinton has a 16 point lead over Dole among women and only a 6- to 8-point lead among men.

"Clinton is especially popular with 'soccer-moms,' the middle-class, white woman who stays home with kids. This is the group most easily swayed — Reagan had a huge amount of support from them," Benson said. Dole and Kemp are focusing on economic issues and women are more interested in domestic issues.

Though democrats are typically more in favor of women's rights, Hillary Clinton moved out of her law firm to be with her husband. Elizabeth Dole is the only woman to serve in two cabinets for two presidents and she is the president of the American Red Cross; she has no children, Benson said.

"Hillary is thought of as the woman activist but is actually the more traditional of the two," he said.

Some people think they are making a statement by not voting, Christensen said. "Although Utah will go Republican, we need to turn out to vote not just for the President but for congressmen. The whole voting procedure is to let our political leaders know how they are doing and what we like."

"Whichever party has a majority in Congress has leadership," Benson said. "It matters which party controls congress."

He explained that in 1992 there was a Democratic congress and a Democratic president which meant they could pass any legislation.

By 1994 Clinton had the lowest approval rating of any president in history. The 40-year Democrat-controlled House of Representatives lost to a 19-seat Republican majority in the 1994 election, Benson said.

Even though Clinton is ahead in the polls, Republicans can gain seats in the Senate in this election, he said. Fifteen senators are retiring which leaves their seats wide open and many Democrats in the south are turning Republican.

Party majority in Congress is important because that party chairs special congressional committees, for example, the Rules Committee decides which pieces of legislation will be debated and voted on, Benson said.

Clinton's Health Care Reform Bill that passed this year turned into a Republican piece of legislation after going through its respective committee, Benson said. "Congress has more power than the President because he can only sign a bill."
